(MINNEAPOLIS) — Elan Credit Card (Elan) and VolCorp have partnered to provide credit unions with an agent credit card program that delivers a suite of industry-leading credit card products, rewards, and customer service to their members.

VolCorp is a not-for-profit financial cooperative that exists with the sole purpose of helping credit unions grow and supporting the businesses they believe in.

“Ensuring our co-op members have the best tools available for their members is a core mission for VolCorp. By partnering with Elan, we can now offer a credit card solution to support growth and deeper member relationships,” said VolCorp President and CEO, Jeff Merry. “We look forward to working together with Elan Credit Card to provide our credit union members with the best resources on the market.”

Elan has been a leader in the credit card industry for over 50 years and currently partners with over 1,200 financial institutions across the United States. The unique partnership model values a commitment to work alongside credit union partners, a dedication to innovation, and comprehensive product suite with top-of-the-line rewards.

“We focus on the unique needs of our credit union partners and their members to deliver the best products, rewards, technology, and customer service. VolCorp is an established resource for many valued credit unions and Elan is proud to begin this partnership to help more credit unions meet the needs of their members with our agent credit card program,” said Matthew Carpenter, SVP Market Director for Elan Credit Card.
